

CORPORATECARING

News about nonprofit groups and businesses' charitable activities

Kocher manages volunteers for Ursuline Campus fair

BY SARAH JEFFORDS
BUSINESS FIRST STAFF WRITER

Susan Kocher likes to say she was "born into the Ursuline community." Her ties to the religious congregation originally trace back to an aunt and great-aunt who both were members of Ursuline Sisters of Louisville.

Kocher was taught by Ursuline sisters, and she has made and maintained several friendships with Ursuline sisters over the years.

"I get from the sisters more than I give," she said. "I have learned how to be loyal, to be committed to someone/somethings, to trust, to laugh and to pray together."

Kocher, who is a counselor for Sacred Heart of Jesus School in Jeffersonville, continually looks for ways to give back to the sisters who have affected her life in such a positive way.

Helping sisters in other ways

She is a longtime volunteer at Marian Home, a licensed health care facility operated by the Ursuline Sisters. She pitches in wherever they need assistance, whether it be answering phones, delivering mail or helping out at meal times.

Four years ago, her work at Marian Home led to her involvement in the

Volunteer Spotlight:
Susan Kocher

Age: 56
Job: Counselor, coordinator of the Learning Difference Program and coordinator

PHOTOS COURTESY OF OVARIAN AWARENESS OF KENTUCKY

OAK raises $17,600 at Toast to Life event at Olmsted

Ovarian Awareness of Kentucky held its annual Toast to Life for gynecological cancer survivors dinner and silent auction recently at The Olmsted, raising more than $17,600 for research, early cancer screening and education programs in Kentucky. Gold sponsors were Aegon, Louisville Metro Councilwoman Tina Ward-Pugh, Norton Cancer Center/Louisville Oncology, Ortho/Tibotec and Today's Woman magazine. OAK board member Jackie Neumann, top left, presents Dr. Mary Gordinier of the Brown Cancer Center with a check for $5,700 for research and an ovarian cancer screening program. Attending the event at top right were Rachel Miller, left, SuzAnne Caraway and Chris Miller. Caraway, who works for United Parcel Service Inc., recruited more than 30 volunteers to help set up for the event.

Falls of Ohio to rock with benefit Sept. 24

The Falls of the Ohio State Park and Interpretive Center will hold a "Rock the Rocks" fund-

'Rock the Rocks'

CORPORATECARING

News about nonprofit groups and businesses' charitable activities

Kocher manages volunteers for Ursuline Campus fair

BY SARAH JEFFORDS
BUSINESS FIRST STAFF WRITER

Susan Kocher likes to say she was "born into the Ursuline community." Her ties to the religious congregation originally trace back to an aunt and great-aunt who both were members of Ursuline Sisters of Louisville.

Kocher was taught by Ursuline sisters, and she has made and maintained several friendships with Ursuline sisters over the years.

"I get from the sisters more than I give," she said. "I have learned how to be loyal, to be committed to someone/somethings, to trust, to laugh and to pray together."

Kocher, who is a counselor for Sacred Heart of Jesus School in Jeffersonville, continually looks for ways to give back to the sisters who have affected her life in such a positive way.

Helping sisters in other ways

She is a longtime volunteer at Marian Home, a licensed health care facility operated by the Ursuline Sisters. She pitches in wherever they need assistance, whether it be answering phones, delivering mail or helping out at meal times.

Four years ago, her work at Marian Home led to her...

Volunteer Spotlight:
Susan Kocher

Age: 56
Job: Counselor, coordinator of the Learning Difference Program and coordinator

PHOTOS COURTESY OF OVARIAN AWARENESS OF KENTUCKY

OAK raises $17,600 at Toast to Life event at Olmsted

Ovarian Awareness of Kentucky held its annual Toast to Life for gynecological cancer survivors dinner and silent auction recently at The Olmsted, raising more than $17,600 for research, early cancer screening and education programs in Kentucky. Gold sponsors were Aegon, Louisville Metro Councilwoman Tina Ward-Pugh, Norton Cancer Center/Louisville Oncology, Ortho/Tibotec and Today's Woman magazine. OAK board member Jackie Neumann, top left, presents Dr. Mary Gordinier of the Brown Cancer Center with a check for $5,700 for research and an ovarian cancer screening program. Attending the event at top right were Rachel Miller, left, SuzAnne Caraway and Chris Miller. Caraway, who works for United Parcel Service Inc., recruited more than 30 volunteers to help set up for the event.

Falls of Ohio to rock with benefit Sept. 24

The Falls of the Ohio State Park and Interpretive Center will hold a "Rock the Rocks" fund-

'Rock the Rocks'

